How?

Think about:

- ✓ Studying GCSE and A Level Business
- ✓ Combining a Business and Marketing degree with a language to get international experience and a chance to spend time abroad
- ✓ Getting a Chartered Institute of Marketing (CIM) certificate or diploma in marketing, offered at four levels of entry
- ✓ Getting to know social media really well – get a Twitter account and discover how businesses use it to market their products

Think Languages:

“Marketing to put it simply is the discipline of communicating with your customers or target audiences. Linguists often take up a career in marketing because of their natural inclination to communicate. Being able to speak French and Italian has really been essential for my career in international marketing.”

– Carys Pugh D’Auria, Head of Trade and Investments, Cardiff and Co
