

Introduction and Preparation

Petits Frères

Jacques Doillon (1999)

NB: English synopsis is not a translation of the French text.

French Synopsis

La seule amie de Talia, c'est Kim, une chienne pitbull douce comme un mouton. Lorsqu'elle fugue et part à la recherche d'un copain dans une cité de banlieue, la jeune fille l'emmène avec elle. Mais la chienne se fait immédiatement voler par quatre garçons... Encore un film sur la banlieue? Avec des jeunes blacks, blancs, beurs et des cités ghettos? Oui, mais cette fois, il n'est pas question de violence à l'école, d'éducateurs lancés dans des missions impossibles, de témoignages sur une société défaillante. Le dernier film de Jacques Doillon, Petits Frères, nous invite juste à faire un tour du côté des jeunes mineurs – à moins de 15 ans, on est encore un enfant – sous la coupe des "grands frères". Le scénario étant centré sur "une fille de 13 ans" qui n'a peur de rien et quatre teenagers roublards et turbulents. Thèmes et décors, bien sûr, commencent à nous être familiers: frictions avec les "keufs", vols de mobs, bizness et drogue... Mais les jeunes héros de Doillon, s'ils cherchent tous à "faire de la thune", font surtout "les quatre cents coups", comme d'autres, en d'autres temps...

fugue

Think of words of the same family in English. Can you guess the meaning?

Blacks, blancs, beurs

This is a reference to the French Bleu, Blanc, Rouge denoting the people of various skin colours that make up the current French population. 'Beur' is an interesting word. It is actually ARABE pronounced backwards. It is an example of Parisian slang called verlan (l'envers – backwards). Can you think of a British equivalent to this form of speech? Try to find out why such words are used in contemporary French.

Défaillante

Think of words of the same family in English. Can you guess the meaning?

Sous la coupe de is an idiomatic expression in English roughly equivalent in meaning to the English phrase: under the thumb of Roublards is a very colloquial term. Look at the following adjective: turbulents and try and guess what roublards is likely to mean.

Keufs is 'verlan' again – from the word flics (another colloquial word which you may want to look up)

Mobs is short for mobylette

Faire de la thune is popular contemporary slang meaning 'to make money'

Faire les quatre cents coups

An idiom meaning 'to get up to no good / make trouble'; also the name of an autobiographical cult-film by François Truffaut (1959) about his childhood antics

English Synopsis

Talia, a thirteen-year-old girl living in one of the poorer districts of Paris, is not happy when her stepfather returns home after a year away, suspecting him of molesting her younger sister. When he orders Talia to get rid of her beloved dog, she leaves with her pet, aiming to stay at a nearby housing project. She becomes acquainted with four boys who are all friends, and who work for older gangs in the area. Eventually, Talia becomes involved in their schemes of petty thievery.
